BEFORE YOU START

Ready to get started? To begin working towards the AA-DTA degree, you simply need to apply and be accepted to CBC. You can apply online at www.columbiabasin.edu.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

When you enroll in the Anthropology program at Columbia Basin College (CBC), you'll study humans in the past and present-day to gain an understanding of human behavior patterns and a wider perspective on the world. Anthropologists strive to understand humans from a cultural and biological perspective. A central concern of today's anthropologists is applying their knowledge to find solutions to human problems.

Anthropology is typically divided into four categories:

- Sociocultural Anthropology
- Biological/Physical Anthropology
- Archaeology
- Linguistic Anthropology

Anthropologists often integrate the perspectives of several of these areas into their research, teaching, and professional lives. When you enroll in Anthropology classes at CBC, you'll develop an understanding of human biological and sociocultural evolution through writing, research, and critical thinking.

OUT OF CLASS TO DO'S

- Contact your professors and/or the CBC Career Services Center to find an internship, observation/shadowing experience or a job in the field related to anthropology.
- Research transfer schools of interest with your professors and/or your Completion Coach.
- Visit the Academic Success Center for quiet study space, small group study, supplemental instruction, and tutoring assistance.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

There are many possible careers related to the study of anthropology:

- Education
You could teach and conduct research on college campuses. Many university departments or programs have a demand for anthropologists.
- Corporations and Business
Corporate anthropologists conduct market research to study consumer patterns that aren't obvious with statistical or survey methods.
- Government
State and local government organizations hire anthropologists for international development, cultural resource management, the legislative branch, forensic and physical anthropology, natural resource management, and defense and security.
- Non-profit and community opportunities
Non-governmental organizations, such as international health organizations and development banks, hire anthropologists to help design and implement a wide variety of programs.
